

The Fritillaria Group is a specialist section of the Alpine Garden Society consisting of members who are particularly interested in the Genus Fritillaria in cultivation and in the wild.

Its objects include publishing newsletters to be distributed to members and to operate in active seed exchange. From time to time non-competitive displays are to be held.

The Group aims to increase the knowledge of all species, both rare and well-known, which make up the Genus. We want to maintain links with devotees around the world; new species are frequently coming to light

Members are asked to help in establishing a list of fritillaries in cultivation as a basis for preserving endangered forms in cultivation and for maintaining their ecological and conservation status in the wild

Subscription: £6 Single, £7 Family, 10 Euros Europe, £9 Rest of the World, renewable annually on 1st October
